Colleagues,

The School of Education is pleased to announce that in conjunction with the Office of Graduate Studies, we are launching three Master of Science degrees in School Leadership for the 2016 Winter Term.

- MS in School Leadership: Instructional Leadership
- MS in School Leadership with School Principal Certification
- MS in School Leadership with Library Media Specialist Certification

These programs demonstrate GSC’s commitment to serving the needs of P-12 educators. With these three focus areas, the MS in School Leadership degrees offer educators the opportunity to advance their professional development within a competency-based, iterative model with a strong clinical component. The unique design of these programs allows educators to immediately put into practice what they are learning in the program.

The MS in School Leadership: Instruction and Leadership focuses on helping classroom teachers improve their effectiveness and encourages them to be innovators and leaders among their peers. The MS in School Leadership with Principal Certification and the MS in School Leadership with Library Media Specialist Certification recognize that School Principals and Library Media Specialists are essential, integral and transformational leaders.

Effective school leaders are innovative, technologically-savvy and data-focused. These three MS degrees help develop this talent in teachers, librarians and principals.

Stay tuned…as soon as it is ready we’ll direct you to granite.edu for more information! In the meantime, should you have any questions please feel free to let me know.

Regards,

Mary
